Dear Bill,

I'm writing to you because of the upcoming election. I am very concerned about the current ability for mining to override all other land uses particularly areas that have been declared to be of very high conservation value and have become Nature refuges where the owners have a legal obligation to look after the land and conserve and improve the biodiversity that takes refuge in these areas.

One of the owners of Bimblebox Nature refuge, Paola Cassoni, has written to many candidates to learn where they stand and I am sending you a copy of her letter because she explains the situation very clearly.

So can you please answer her question for me - where do you stand on the mining and destruction of Nature Refuges and other areas of high conservation value?

Regards,
